WITH EYES OF FLESH: THE BIBLE, GENDER AND HUMAN RIGHTS

In her recently released work, this distinguished feminist theologian takes up the questions of human dignity, and analyzes the disturbing phenomenon of Christian Honor Killings in Muslim countries, making it clear that such crimes can in no way be considered biblically authorized or acceptable to communities of faith.

From ancient dynastic art showing the denigration of human dignity to early modern witchcraft trials and current gender apartheid in Iran, Fontaine takes on the difficult questions of faith and justice without resorting to saccharine piety or blind unwillingness to examine the suffering of women and others from the point of view of religious belief.

With her refreshingly accessible and scholarly-informed writing style, Fontaine crosses over from the ancient past of the formation of the Bible into the modern world of its application, and does not flinch from what she discovers.

Published by Sheffield Phoenix Press in both hardcover and paperback, this book is available through Amazon.com .
